ADDITIONAL SHOCKS JOLT MANAGUA; PIN HOPE ON QUICK ARRIVAL OF RELIEF

RESCUE GROUPS ARE BECOMING EXHAUSTED BY WORK

Hundreds of Bodies Are Buried in Common

OTHERS ARE CREMATED

Search for Victims Under Smoking Ruins Continues

ABOARD U. S. S. ROCHESTER, Apr. 2—(INS)—Severe additional earth shocks again jolted Managua at 8.10 last night, the commandant of the Fifteenth Naval District at Balboa informed the U. S. S. Rochester today.

The remaining Airways Radio Station at the Nicaraguan capital has been temporarily abandoned, the dispatch added, this being the last message sent.

I. N. S. Special Correspondent
MANAGUA, NICARAGUA, Apr. 2—Devastated Managua, reduced to shambles by Tuesday's continuing earthquakes and fires, staked all hope today on the quick arrival of relief forces rushing here by air, land and sea.

Exhausted local rescue detachments composed largely of American marines and medical units defied tremendous obstacles in their efforts to fight off epidemic and alleviate the sufferings of survivors, thousands of whom were evacuated in the last twenty-four hours to prevent hunger and thirst as well as further casualties.

Hundreds of bodies have been buried in common graves and others were cremated to frustrate the spread of disease, while the search for victims still under the smoking ruins continued unabated. Attempts to identify or count the crushed and mangled bodies were abandoned, with fatalities estimated at 1,000 and the number of injured running into several thousand.

Under the leadership of United States forces, survivors have been encamped by the thousand on the hills overlooking the gaunt ruins of their homes protruding through a grey smoke pall, reddened by fires that break forth sporadically in the northern part of the city.

Marines under command of Lieut.
Colonel D. L. Sultan, of the United States engineers dynamited scores of buildings in a futile battle against the persistent conflagration. Late yesterday the $1,000,000 national palace with its precious government records had to be abandoned to the flames.

The recurring but less violent shocks occasionally sent whole rows of weakened walls tumbling into the debris-choked streets, further endangering rescue squads and spreading fresh panic among the survivors.

Strangely similar to the familiar processions of war refugees which clogged the roads of Europe during the war, these often half-clad and hungry quake victims faced weepingly away from their stricken home city and set off for strange regions. The poorer ones walked barefooted
through the dust alongside ox carts, trucks and limousines. A few gestures of farewell came from the hundreds of other survivors encamped under trees and along the road.

In the city, martial law prevailed and with it came a sort of deathlike hush. Only one case of looting has been reported, with native activities confined to those searching the ruins for missing family members or bits of property.

The fatalities among Americans, as far as could be learned, remained at three but dozens of others were injured.

President Moneada and his cabinet joined hands with United States Minister Matthew E. Hanna in coordinating relief forces until outside help can penetrate. After a long conference it was decided that residents should be encouraged to evacuate the city for nearby centers, as first surveys indicated that the city must be rebuilt from top to bottom. A preliminary report showed that no single structure in the city is absolutely safe.

Two Croydon Girls Back After Day and Night Away

CROYDON, April 2.—The two girls who left their homes here early Tuesday morning, without notifying their parents, returned last night.

The girls said that they had gone to Trenton in a bus. "We had $2 between us."

Th two girls, after roaming about the streets and viewing the Easter styles, went to a rooming house where the woman in charge permitted them to sleep without charge.

Yesterday morning the two girls spent the balance of the money they had for breakfast.

12,290 pounds of milk.

In this group there were 127 cows which produced over 300 pounds of butterfat. One produced between 500 and 600 pounds, 24 between 400 and 500 pounds and 102 produced between 300 and 400 pounds.

Group 2, of which Mr. Weller is the tester, had an average of 271 cows and their average milk production per cow was 8525 pounds. Their butter-

IOWA'S PROGRESS IN AVIATION HAS BEEN DELAYED

Hinges on City's Court Fight
For Municipal Air
Port

INJUNCTION IS SOUGHT

Present Field on Leased Land
Seven Miles From City

Following is the fourteenth of a series of articles dealing with the aviation situation in the United States.

By Curtis K. Hay, Jr.
(INS Staff Correspondent)
DES MOINES, Ia., Apr. 2.—Aviation interests in Iowa are watching closely a court battle in Des Moines around which will hinge much of the progress to be made in the next two or three years by the state along aeronautical lines.

The battle is between citizens of the capital city on the purchase of land for establishing a new municipal airport, badly needed at present.

The case, a suit for injunction against the purchase by the city of a site already selected for the new airport, is now in Polk county district court but undoubtedly will go into the state Supreme court regardless of the decision in the lower tribunal since both factions have indicated they will appeal in the event their side loses.

Behind the city in its defense is the local American Legion which has led the fight for the establishment of the new field.

The municipal airport now in use,
the only landing field near Des Moines is on land leased by the city and is seven miles northeast of Des Moines.
No other airport in the state is that far from the city the field serves.

To Be Heard at Session
Opening May 4th

GRAND JURY 1ST WEEK

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 2.—One solid month of criminal court is scheduled for May in Bucks county according to the schedule of cases being prepared now in the office of District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown, and Assistant District Attorney J. Leslie Kilcoyne, Bristol.

For the first time in the history of the Bucks county courts three panels of seventy-two jurors each have been called for traverse jury duty in addition to the grand jury.

During the first week of court which starts on Monday, May 4th, the grand jury will be in session. They will have presented to them three bills of indictment charging murder against three defendants. The first week of traverse jury trials will start on May 11, the second week on May 18 and the third week on May 25.

There will be a murder case for trial each week following the first week of grand jury court. John Tagg, Jack Massey and William C. Snipes, charged with the murder of Edward Gamils, proprietor of the Blue Spruce Inn, Trevoise, will be tried separately one week apart.

Aside from the murder trials there are approximately twenty other cases to be tried in May. This number may be considerably increased during the next month. Ten plead guilty will be taken at a session of court on Monday, April 6.

The Jury Commissioners have completed drawing 238 names of Bucks county residents who will be summoned for grand jury and traverse jury duty.

The Unemployed

The Courier has been furnished with a list of unemployed in the territory surrounding Bristol by the Bucks County Division, Pennsylvania Unemployment Commission.

All of the persons listed have been visited personally by the county nurse and are all being supported either by local welfare committees or by the township supervisors.

In the letter from the Committee it is stated that the persons listed are willing to do any kind of work, the women will do housework or anything which they are able to do. The majority of them have been residents of this county for over a year.

The list will be furnished by the Courier to responsible persons interested who desire to procure the services of any of these folks.

BRISTOL TO HAVE FORD DAY, APRIL 18

Parade Including All Kinds of Ford Cars to Be A Feature

WILL OFFER PRIZES, TOO

A Ford day is being planned for Bristol, the date set being Saturday, April 18th.

The local Ford dealer, Thomas A.
Collier, always foremost in the ranks of the Ford dealers in this section, together with his many friends, is eagerly waiting for the day of the big event.

The day will start with a parade of Ford cars and trucks furnished by owners, as well as a caravan of new cars and trucks furnished by the Ford Motor Company.

Prizes are to be offered for the best decorated, the oldest, the one driven by the fattest man, the fattest woman, the one that has been operated the greatest number of miles, the one bringing the largest number of people, the one coming the greatest distance, the most dilapidated, the one bringing the largest number of children, the one bringing the largest family, etc.
Prizes are also to be awarded for the best decorated truck in the parade. A fleet of Lincoln cars will head the parade, according to present plans, these carrying the borough officials and leading citizens.

It is also believed that this event will bring many people to Bristol, and be a great stimulus to business. It is expected that people of the borough and outlying districts will participate.

The prizes will be purchased from various merchants, these being displayed some time before the day set.

Included in the plan is the giving away of tickets by Bristol merchants with purchases.

Detailed plans will be set forth later by Mr. Collier.

Efforts To Locate Body In Sunken Barge Fail

Efforts to locate the body of George Gittelle, who has been missing since the dredge of a Boston construction company, burned to the water's edge and then sank in the Delaware River Thanksgiving morning, off Croydon, have been unsuccessful.

A complete search of the dredge and the river-bed around and under it have failed to reveal any sight of Gittelle's body.

Coroner William Young, of Burlington, recently visited the ruins of the dredge, and said that he believed that it would be impossible to locate the body even if it was there.

"There is a mass of molten iron which has been twisted by the intense heat of the fire. If Gittelle's body was there, it has gone.

According to the other members of the crew Gittelle was seen standing on the burning dredge when the others leaped into the water and walked the pipe line to safety. He has not been seen since.

FOUR YOUTHS ROB "GAS" STATION AT SOUTH LANGHORNE

Order "Eats" and Rob Register While Attendant is Out

ALL NEATLY DRESSED

Made Their Escape in Auto
Left Standing Outside

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 2.—Four young men walked into the "This-A-Do" gas station and eating place along the Lincoln highway here, shortly before last midnight and robbed the cash register of between $15 and $20.

The quartette is described as merely high school boys. They were all neatly dressed and entered under the pretense that they wanted something to eat and drink.

The cash register was robbed while Mrs. Anna Bednar was outside selling gasoline.

In describing the robbery today Mrs.
Bednar said that she was alone in the place at the time. Her husband had gone into the rear of the building.

"Four young men, between 18 and 20 years of age, came in and asked for 'hot dogs' and coffee. First only one of the group ordered then a second one said 'Serve us all.'"

"I went back into the back room to heat the coffee and the 'dogs' when a motorist drove up for gas. I went outside to wait on him and when I came back for my flashlight so that I could see inside of the tank, I noticed that one of the boys had changed his place over to a table near the cash register. But I did not think anything of it.

"I went outside again and while taking the money from the motorist
the four men ran from the store, jumped into their automobile and dashed up the Highway. My husband had by this time come in from the rear and he asked me what the trouble was. I glanced at the register and found that we had been robbed."

A hold-up also occurred at the gasoline station of John Stutz, Roosevelt Boulevard and Pennypack Circle, By-berry, last night, four young men making a get-away with $37 in cash.

It is thought this quartet is the same as the one robbing the "This-A-Do" station, South Langhorne, the time of the Stutz robbery occurring a short while after the four left South Langhorne.

Township Road Bill Includes Bucks County

HARRISBURG, April 2.—The administration's bill to have the Highway Department assume responsibility for 29,000 miles of township roads was introduced last night in the House by Representative Hildesheimer, Lycoming, chairman of the Roads Committee. The measure is the biggest ever introduced in the Pennsylvania Legislature. It contains 1138 pages and specifies 4713 separate road routes to become a part of the State system.

Approval of the measure will make the Highway Department responsible for future maintenance and construction after August 15 of this year.

Road sections ranging approximately 600 feet to nearly forty miles are contained in the bill. The longest single road is in Cumberland county and it is 39.5 miles long. It extends virtually from one end of the county to the other. The next longest single route is 38.7 miles in Lancaster county.

Cameron county will have the smallest mileage taken over. There the State will assume the maintenance of 22.2 miles. Lancaster county leads with 653.97 miles of township roads to be taken over. Mileage in some of the other counties is:

Adams, 277.5; Berks, 557.2; Bucks, 453.85; Carbon, 130.6; Centre, 189.25;
Chester, 587.97; Cumberland, 298.3; Dauphin, 258.2; Delaware, 159.35; and Montgomery, 400.6.

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

Until a few years ago there was not much of an international problem connected with the business of manufacturing motion pictures. The pictures themselves were pantomime, universally understood. The subtitles, when films were prepared for export, were reproduced in the language of their foreign audiences.

Then along came the "talkies." And the "talkies" talked Americanese. This obstacle was surmounted by leaving out the words and music and inserting subtitles for the export trade.

But eventually film fans abroad demanded the real thing—the film that talked. This demand was rather crudely met, with synchronized sound records in the language of the importing country. Finally, foreign actors doubled for Hollywood voices.

And now after years of effort, expense and experimentation the film industry learns that a large proportion of film addicts in foreign countries want not the Hollywood product in their own language but the Hollywood product in the parlance of Hollywood. They want American films to teach them English.

Educators have for years tried to evolve a universal language. Esperanto and a dozen like systems have been worked out, but none has taken hold. And now the youngest child of American dramatic ingenuity is going up and down the world teaching the people of all climes to speak English.

NORMALCY

Members of Congress are home and relatively quiescent. President Hoover voyages serenely in tropic waters far from that mad scene. Lobbyists, agitators and reformers are on vacation. All the land is at peace and the public finds itself taking a calmer view of the events and happenings of the last three months.

The country has not been happy. The winter, for all its mildness, was long and dreary. The public had watched with some misgivings the second year of the present administration come to a close, and was uneasy while Congress was in session. And business and employment conditions were such as to make the people panicky.

Radicalism in politics had had a revival. The accumulated grievances of a stock market crash and more than a year of business depression and unemployment emptied the vials of their wrath during the winter. The country had seen the hordes of treasury raiders, subsidy hunters and political god-sakers swoop down upon the national treasury, and had heard the breast-beaters and demagogues making common cause.

Then spring came and Congress adjourned and the nation raised its anxious eyes to find that it still lived, that the ship of state had come safely through the storm, that, save for the clouds of a $500,000,000 treasury deficit, the horizon was clear.

So many, who, under the spell of gloom, had held Mr. Hoover and his administration responsible for the country's woes, are now singing his praises for having steered the country through the treacherous shoals of radicalism, extravagance and hysteria.

BUILDS HER UP AFTER FLU ATTACK

Oaklyn mother now tells how Life Tonic helped her little nine-year-old girl.

"My little girl was run down after a severe case of flu or gripe and was having a hard time getting back to normal. I found that she lacked pep, was grouchy, hard to please and I felt very badly because I knew it was all caused by the flu. I was amazed to see the change in Norma after she started taking Life Tonic. She has now taken two bottles and has long since been back in school and is feeling fine and strong again. I liked the effects of Life Tonic so well that I have since started taking it myself." Mrs. Eleanor D. Sharp, 56 W. Clifton Ave., Oaklyn.

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST" By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XXXVII.
ED hailed them gaily and gave Bim a long, speculative look. "Some mermaid," he said. And placed a warm hand on her shoulder, pressing down.
She shook herself free, half angry and half amused. Flirtatiousness was in Ted's blood; he probably couldn't help it.
"Found your lighter?" she inquired.
He answered with a trace of annoyance in his tone. "I did not and if anybody's snatched it there'll be doings. It's the only one I ever had that would work," he explained more reasonably.
She told him it was hard luck and set out with Carey across the grounds toward the house. They walked by the wall at the back of the estate and half way to the summer house met Millicent hurrying toward the stile. She was rushing along with her head down and at sight of them stopped short and, as it seemed to Bim, in some confusion.

"It was just going to see Em for a minute," she said, glancing at Carey.

"But you're going in the wrong direction for that," he told her.
She said, Yes—well, I—thought it seemed sort of late after all and Bob's alone. I won't stop now." She hurried away.

Bim and Carey smiled at each other. "Almost crazy with worry," the girl remarked. "Poor little thing."

Hard to Decide

But Carey stared after the little figure clambering over the stile.

Bim refused Carey's invitation to dinner and left him on the corner by the Reformed Church. After she had turned out a sizeable pile of copy for the Banner she spent a half-hour marketing and telephoned Walter that old Tom and herself expected him for the evening meal. It was a quiet, comfortable hour they had together with old Tom and Walter talking shop and Bim making frequent trips between the kitchen and the table. Something restless about Walter, she told herself; something which satisfied as no sparkling career in New York would.

Yet when the village clock was striking eleven and she was waiting in the darkness of Imogene's room for what might—or might not—happen downstairs, she was not so sure. She had always wanted a career.

It probably was about half past eleven that the gentle tapping began. More crafty tonight than had been last, Bim stole downstairs and unlocked the door of the boudoir. She accomplished this almost noiselessly but in the instant that the door swung back she knew that her quarry had escaped.

What happened? She never was sure. The room was dark as the corridor and as the night beyond the open window opposite. Yet she thought that something slid through the room and out that window.

Bim did not move. Then the door beyond—the one which gave into the linen room—creaked faintly and almost simultaneously a force that seemed terrific fell upon her and bowled her over.

The door beyond creaked faintly and a force that seemed terrific fell upon her.

The darkness that was round about seemed to slide inside her head and she knew no more.

Bim awakened in Imogene's room with no idea whatever how she came to be there. She was lying on the bed with a blanket thrown across her rumpled dress. When she tried to raise her head she found that it ached terribly and an exploratory finger located a sore place above her temple.

"Knocked for the loop you hear so much about," she told herself with a little shiver. "There still seem to be things going on around Eagle's Nest!"

As well as she could because of the headache, she debated with herself whether to tell Walter what had happened. In the end this seemed the wisest course even though it would increase his opposition to her activities in the murder case.

Accidental Eavesdropping

When the first warm rays of sunlight slanted through the chink of dawn outside the window, she managed to pull herself together and started out for the kitchen where she hoped to find the hot coffee which would relieve the headache and the distressing dryness of her throat. It was earlier than she had thought, however, for the household was still asleep—or so it seemed until she had got as far as the little back hallway outside the kitchen.

Pausing here with her hand to her head, Bim heard voices—that is she heard a man's voice, low pitched and tense on the other side of the door. What he was saying came to her ears in an indistinguishable murmur pierced by sobs. A woman's sobs, Bim thought dizzily.

When the murmur stopped there was only the sobbing; then Bim heard the man say quite clearly, "You've got to beat it, you hear? You've got to beat it before—" She could not make out the rest of that sentence. When next he spoke it was less tensely and in a tone like a sigh; "I'll do all I can, though that's little enough. Make things up to you. You think I haven't paid?"

A board creaked under Bim's foot and when she turned the knob and passed into the kitchen, the room was empty.

There was a rustle in the butler's pantry, nevertheless, and almost at once William appeared and regarded Bim with polite surprise.

She said, "Is there any coffee, William? I've a headache. I thought perhaps cook was down."

"Certainly, Miss; shall you have it in your room? It's all ready, Miss."

She saw then that a percolator was bubbling on a side table and toast was browning in an electric machine. "I like a cup of coffee before my swim," the amazing butler went on as he began to prepare a tray. "I'll bring this up at once."

A Long Chance

But she seated herself at the kitchen table and she would remain there. "Didn't I hear you talking to someone, William?"

"I took the liberty of using the telephone, Miss. I've a friend down on his luck, so to speak. It's him I was talking to, Miss."

Bim regarded the man steadily, wondering at his poise. Of course he did not know how much of that low-pitched conversation she had heard but was taking a chance—a long chance—that it had not been too much.

"Have you always been a butler?" she asked curiously and watched a slow flush run up his face. But there was a twinkle in his red-brown eyes; he meant to consider her question merely an evidence of friendly interest.

"I've had my ups and downs, Miss. But I'm not a bad occupation for one that doesn't object to going into service. May I give you some toast, Miss?"

She accepted the toast, reflecting meanwhile that he had evaded her question in a skillful way. The house was a-stir before Bim had finished her breakfast and after a third cup of coffee she went to the room Em had assigned her on the third floor. Imogene had left and Bim threw herself upon the bed and was almost immediately asleep.

A tap awakened her a long time later and in response to her sleepy answer Jane appeared.

Iowa's Aviation Progress Has Been Delayed

Ottumwa, and Sioux City. Sioux City and Davenport have two fields each, the only cities in Iowa boasting more than one field.

Both the fields at each city are operated by aviation concerns flying on chartered trips.

At Davenport Wallace Field, four miles east of the city is peculiarly constructed being nearly twice as long as it is wide. It is 3,500 feet long and only 1,800 feet wide. The other field, known as Davenport airport, three and one half miles northwest of the Iowa member of the tri-cities, is about 150 acres in size, nearly square.

Rickenbacker field at Sioux City, named after America's great war bird, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, is only 10 acres in size. It is six and one half miles from the city. The other port there, the Sioux City airport is four miles from town, north east, has 140 acres of landing space.

The majority of airports in the state which are operated regularly average 80 to 100 acres in size and are equipped with small hangars for the use of the company operating the port and boundary lights.

The municipal fields in Iowa besides the one at Des Moines are located at Burlington, Cedar Falls, Cedar Rapids, Centerville, Iowa City, Rockwell City, and Shenandoah.

Burlington Airport, Cedar Falls Airport, Centerville Airport, Stewart Air Field, at Rockwell City, and the Kiwanis field at Shenandoah are all fairly small fields with only occasional flying being done from these fields.

None of them is equipped for night flying and they have only small facilities.

Cedar Rapids has a large field three miles south of the city. The port is equipped with landing lights, a beacon and was at one time part of the air mail system in Iowa.

Smith Field at Iowa City at one time was the major air field in the state. It is now operated by the Boeing lines and is equipped with night landing lights. The field is located two miles southwest of the city.

Plans made by the state fair board for this year include the second annual national air show at the state fair in August. The event last year drew large crowds and even more extensive plans are being made for the 1931 show.

Although no new aviation ordinances were added to the state regulations this year the state legislature two years ago established several major laws governing stunting and insuring greater safety to fliers and spectators both.

Arrests of pilots for flying low over cities have been made several times recently and efforts are made at all times at the majority of the airports in the state to prevent fliers from stunting over the field.

THE 84TH ANNUAL REPORT of The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, covering operations for the year 1930, will be formally presented to the stockholders at the annual meeting on April 14th, 1931. The report shows that although the Company's total operating revenues in 1930 declined over $112,000,000, it earned a net income sufficient not only to pay 8% dividends and all other charges, but also to provide a surplus of nearly $11,500,000.

BERG, BEST FIGHTING
BRITON; HARVEY DONE

By Les Conklin
(INS Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, Apr. 2.—Jack (Kid) Berg, junior welterweight champion, is the only good British fighter in the ring today.

That is the conclusion reached by New York boxing fans after watching Len Harvey, Britain's only other outstanding boxer, in three losing bouts in the United States.

Harvey's lack of aggressiveness, his inability to weather body punches and his apparent lack of fighting heart have soured the New York boxing public on him completely.

The tall, rangy British middleweight champion was given every opportunity to make good here. His "official" record of 349 victories, including 200 knockouts, in 350 bouts abroad was broadcast throughout the United States. Metropolitan papers devoured reams of publicity written about the dynamite in his mitts, his boxing skill, the fact that an ordinary man's collar wouldn't be large enough to fit around his right forearm, his fondness for Welsh rarebits, his likeness to Bob Fitzsimmons, and so welter and so welter.

Boxing writers were impressed by the pallid Briton's work at training camp before his first bout here. Some declared he would wade through the American middleweight contenders like a Greenwich Village poet gobbling tea biscuits at a bridge party. An international bout between Harvey and Mickey Walker for the championship loomed on the horizon.

For his first "victim" Harvey was given Vince Dundee, a New Jersey Italian noted chiefly for his ability to get up off the floor. For three minutes the Briton's American debut was a complete success. He had Dundee on the floor twice in the first round for long counts, but thereafter his star was destined to fade. Dundee arose from the canvas, carried the fight to his rival and won the decision.

Many claimed Harvey was robbed of the verdict, so the fighters were rematched. The second bout was almost an exact duplicate of the first except that Dundee did not bite the dust.

To bolster his rapidly waning reputation, Harvey was matched with Ben Jehy, a second rater, by Jimmy Johnston, his newly-acquired manager. Madison Square Garden was criticised for handing the Briton a set-up.

Jehy, the "set-up," employed Dundee's tactics successfully by boring in and taking the steam out of Harvey with body punches. The Briton declined to lead and failed to follow up his blows when he did land solid smashes. He failed to make use of his tremendous advantage over the New Yorker in height and reach.

Harvey's "I don't care" attitude disgusted the fans. He may continue his campaign here this summer, but will no longer be a headliner until he can put more heart into his work.

Langhorne Herd Is
First In Production

fat production per cow was 316.3 pounds.

Willis M. Hunsberger, Plumsteadville, whose herd consisted of 18 registered Holsteins, ranked first in milk production and in the production of butterfat. His herd produced 12,171 pounds of milk per cow and 417.7 pounds of butterfat per cow.

The highest cow for milk production in this group is owned by Nicholas Goetter, Fountainville. This cow a registered Holstein, produced 18,686 pounds of milk and 611.6 pounds of butterfat. The highest cow for butterfat production in this group was a registered Holstein belonging to Joseph Hallowell, Ivyland. This cow produced 17,562 pounds of milk and has to her credit 619.1 pounds of butterfat.

In this group 158 cows produced over 200 pounds of butterfat per cow. Two produced between 600 and 700 pounds, six between 500 and 600 pounds and 119 between 300 and 400 pounds.

Group 3, of which Mr. Daniels is the tester, had an average of 215 cows and the average milk production per cow was 7964 pounds. The average yield of butterfat was 315.5 per cow.

Heart Sick City
Honors Knute Rockne

students who had not been on the grounds for years. The great football teams of the last dozen years could not bring them back—but Rockne did today.

Official committees from Notre Dame clubs of Chicago and the St. Joe Valley stood idly by because further plans awaited the arrival of Mrs. K. K. Rockne from Florida, early this morning.

Meanwhile, hundreds of telegrams from all parts of the country requested the information that even the president could not give, and that was the day of services.

It is Father O'Donnell's suggestion that Wednesday be named.

It was believed that leading Notre Dame men who have been scanning lists containing hundreds of Rockne's closest friends for the selection of those who would escort the famed coach to his resting place would end up by naming the following six as pall bearers:

Tom Conley, captain of the 1930 eleven; Tom Yarr, captain-elect of the

Dave's Delicatessen

1931 eleven; and the famous backfield of the 1931 team—Frank Carideo, Markey Schwartz and Larry Mullins. Knute had so many intimate friends that the task of naming pall bearers would be a hopeless one. His players likely will offer the solution.

Whether the services will be held in Sacred Heart Church on the campus has not been determined. It is a certainty that thousands will storm the church on the day of the final rites and for that reason there is a possibility that Notre Dame stadium, which will serve as Rockne's monument may serve as the setting for the requiem mass.

The gymnasium, too, which will seat 5,000, may be considered as the location for the services.

In order to hold mass in either the stadium or the gymnasium, a dispensation from Bishop Noll of Fort Wayne would have to be obtained, it was believed that this would be granted.

All of South Bend is in mourning. Practically every shop window holds pictures of Rockne draped in black. Flags on office buildings are at half mast.

Many of the stars that Rockne had developed here were planning to leave their homes in various parts of the country to pay tribute to their idol. Among the early arrivals were Adams Walsh, captain of the famous "Four Horsemen," and his brother, "Chilly," now coach at St. Louis University.

Jimmy Phelan, former coach at Purdue, and now the chieftain at the University of Washington, was on his way. So was Jesse Harper, the man who taught Knute all his early football.

Telegrams of condolence ran into the thousands. They came from the White House and the tenements. There was scarcely a name known in public life that wasn't signed to a wire.

Thousands stood with bowed heads last night to receive their idol, at the New York Central station. It was a different gathering than the one that had shouted his name and those of his players on their return last December from the conquest of Southern California.

Shifting Their Positions

By HARDIN BURNLEY

TIME alters all things, including, of course, the positions as well as the efficiency of ball players. When a great infielder begins to slow down even a trifle, it is the common practice to transpose him into another position where the grind on the legs and other speed muscles is not so great.

An excellent illustration of such changes was exemplified in the career of Joe Sewell, former Cleveland infielder. For about nine years he played shortstop superbly and was considered one of the best in the majors. However a shortstop has to cover a lot of ground and needs agile feet for the task. Therefore, several seasons ago, when it was evident that the diminutive star's legs had slowed down, Sewell was transferred to the hot corner, where there was not much territory to cover.

Now for example, consider the case of Freddie Lindstrom, for several seasons a great third baseman with the New York Giants. This year training camp efforts were made to convert him into an outfielder, because the team had acquired a promising dizzy corner rookie in Johnny Vergez, who was a sensation in the Pacific Coast League. At this writing Vergez is doing well on defense, but with the bat he's no Lindstrom thus far. So McGraw may finally decide to return the ever reliable "Lindy" to third. Freddie does not object to a garden outpost, and in the training games he played brilliantly in right field.

Perhaps the most interesting of the contemplated 1931 changes in position is that of Mark Koenig, former Yankee shortstop, who is trying to qualify now as a pitcher for the Detroit Tigers. Koenig still has a rifle arm. He was unable to win a regular infield berth with the Tigers last season and near its finish, he decided to utilize his hurling ability. Experts are dubious but all of them would be delighted if Mark can make the grade on the big league mound.

The attempt to switch Hack Wilson and Kiki Cuyler of the Chicago Cubs from center to right field respectively was done out of consideration to the wear and tear on big Hack's knotted legs, but neither player approved of the plan advanced by Manager Rogers Hornsby who, incidentally, may displace Capt. Charley Grimm at first, if the going at second base proves too strenuous for the veteran "Rajah."

Such switch ideas are all motivated by that fundamental factor in the longevity of all strenuous athletic stars, i. e., "the legs go first and playing details should be arranged accordingly."
